VERDICT YESTERDAY.

Grand Jury Is Still In Session With Much To Do.

The trial of Wm. P. Winfree, Jr., was concluded at noon Thursday and went to the jury. John Feland and Walter Knight spoke Wednesday afternoon and the next morning C. H. Bush for the defense and Denny P. Smith for the State closed the argument.

It was the general opinion that the State had made out a stronger case than before, when a hung jury resulted.

The jury brought in a verdict of "not guilty" early yesterday morning.

Postponed cases of minor importance are receiving the attention of circuit court this week.

The grand jury is proving to be a working body and has a great deal of unfinished work before it this week and will remain in session next week. It is diving deep into various kinds of law-breaking and is making a strong effort to find indictments for gaming. F. G. Petre, a witness who declined to talk and was sent to jail, remained in jail only a few hours. He went before the jury again Thursday.

They cleared out.

The Weather Has Been Fine And The Attendance Good.

BIG CROWD TO-DAY.

Best Of Order And Everything Points To a Happy Finish.

The Pythian Carnival has had good crowds every night this week, but not the attendance the merits of the attractions warrant. Yesterday was the best day in point of attendance and this is expected to be still better, as it is the day that most of the country people will attend. There has never been a cleaner or more deserving list of attractions here and several of them possess unusual merit.

The pony award will take place this evening and will of course bring out a big crowd. To-night there will be a whirlwind finish with a fine band concert.

Mr. J. C. Adcock, of near Church Hill, brought to this office a bean pod which measures 14 inches in length. He grew a crop of these beans this year, but does not know the variety. ## STANLEY FLAYS HIS OPPONENT

Crowd of People Turned Into Frenzied, Shouting Mass When Stanley Speaks.

STANLEY VINDICATED.

Replies to Charges That He Has Incited Tobacco Grower to Violence.

Henderson, Ky., Oct. 6.—In joint debate here tonight with John Worsham, republican candidate for congress, Congressman A. O. Stanley vindicated himself from charges that he incited "night riding" in the Kentucky tobacco district. Never was such a scene witnessed in this city before as when Congressman Stanley concluded and the entire audience went wild with cheering. For several minutes pandemonium reigned. Hats were thrown in the air, throats ripped open with shouts and men stood on chairs in their frenzy. Again, when Worsham had made his rebuttal and the meeting broke up, the great audience pushed for the platform to take Stanley by the hand. He shook hands for half an hour and was congratulated right and left.

The debate was held in a tobacco factory. Three thousand men attended. Interest was intense. Mr. Worsham spoke for an hour. He devoted the major part of his time to reading extracts from Republican newspapers wherein Stanley was charged with uttering words calculated to incite night riders to violence. Although Mr. Stanley had asked his supporters in the audience to give Worsham an attentive hearing, the supporters of the congressman could not suppress their enthusiasm. Time and again, as Worsham closed a reading, the audience shouted for Stanley in chorus.

Stanley's reply to Worsham set the crowd wild. Mr. Stanley begged them to cease cheering and not to take up his time. But as he launched into a plain statement of his actions and utterances about the tobacco war, the audience time and again broke in with deafening applause.

He said that he deplored the tobacco question had been dragged into politics by Mr. Worsham. "I have done all I could," said Stanley, "to keep the question where it belongs—outside of politics."

Mr. Stanley went on to show where he had spoken, begged and pleaded for peaceful measures. Far from exciting violence he demonstrated his influence always had been to mitigate trouble in the tobacco districts.

He declared, amid shouts and hand-clapping, so loud and prolonged as to drown out his voice, that the Republican candidate for Congress would not have enough votes to make a corporal's guard or hold a good sized caucus.

Worsham closed with fifteen minutes rebuttal. He stated that Stanley's speech had been calculated to cause trouble between the miners and mine owners.

The demonstration made by the crowd at the close of the meeting was the popular verdict. Thousands shook hands with Stanley, while but few greeted the Republican nominee. People came from all over the district to hear the debate. Stanley's election is unquestioned.
